

I was not beholden to a government or its ideals that provided my training. My family did not believe that freedom was having everything provided. We all worked very hard and my family was very frugal. But at a point in my skating when I was going to have to quit, the charity of Mr. Walter Williamson as the sponsor of my skating allowed me to continue working to become the best I could be. This kind of charity one can never repay, nor did Mr. Williamson ever expect me to repay his charity to me, though I can pass on what I learned from it. He never exploited me or my name nor did he keep me beholden to him. His charity remained a quiet, unassuming foundation of my ability to learn to be free in my skating.

In this great nation, hard work and charity have been the often unnamed foundation that has helped develop hopes and dreams.

The freedom of our nation allowed my parents to choose a coach who valued discipline and hard work. And Miss Kohout, with incredible charity, freely chose to stop sending bills for lessons as my skating started to blossom.

By God's grace I was the benefactor of the free and charitable spirit of my coach and sponsor. Besides the generosity of Mr. Williamson and Miss Kohout, there was a man and wife, who we had never met, who freely offered to pay for my skates. And some generous people in New York helped me with costumes, as well as street clothes and hair cuts, in order to present myself properly. Professional secretaries freely gave of their time and energy to help with my mail when it became too overwhelming, and my mom tells of her friends and neighbors who would each take a part of my costumes to bead. Friends, family and neighbors often traveled to my competitions for quiet moral support. My ballet teacher, Helen Olson, patiently worked with me for many years, though I had no flexibility and had no promise of dancing. There was a woman from Rockford who donated cowboy hats to go with my choreography to the music of Rodeo. An American soldier on leave in Davos, Switzerland volunteered to shovel snow from the ice a few hours a day so I could practice school figures while training for a World Championship, though the snow did not stop for three weeks. The stories of help and charity are endless—all made possible by freedom.

The freedom to give and receive and to work hard and have the choice of how to use what we earn through our hard work—this freedom, based on self-control and self-government, was a foundation of my skating. Without this freedom and charitable spirit I would not have had the opportunity to develop my skating talent for God and for all those that took part. Ultimately it was God Who gave me this freedom. It was His plan for my life.

Family, faith and freedom—The three deep foundations that supported my skating. The foundational skills of skating allowed me to gain freedom to express the joy God put in my soul. And my desire to express God's love on the ice changed the destiny of one young woman in Japan. God's power and love is all about changed lives, and nations that are renewed, free and civilized.

The foundations of these United States of America have, and can again allow the greatest nation on earth to continue to express what God has put into our national soul and spread that freedom for others to enjoy.

As I learn again the foundations of my skating. I hope you will join me in learning again the foundations of family, faith, and freedom, starting in our own minds, hearts and homes. I want all of our children to inherit a nation where God is not shut out, a strong nation that is free and civilized. I hope we can rise above the desire to just do things that appeal to our senses, and rebuild a nation that fulfills the yearning of the soul.

May God grant us the will to do so.

To end, I would like to dedicate the ice arena that will carry my name, to all those who have sacrificed so I could learn to be free on the ice; to all those who have sacrificed so our nation can be free, and to God Who has given us the foundations in the Ten commandments and teaches us how to be free without fear of getting hurt. It is these unsung heroes who deserve the honor, and God Who deserves the glory.

Thank you for your kind attention as I have tried to share what the honor you have given me means to me.

SPEECH OF DEPUTY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE, RUDY DE LEON

HON. ELLEN O. TAUSCHER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, October 5, 2000

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit into the record a speech by Deputy Secretary of Defense Rudy de Leon. This speech takes a look at the state of America's military, its accomplishments over the last decade, its challenges in recruiting and retaining the best people, and the realities we face in building the next generation of our fighting force.

Perhaps most importantly, Secretary de Leon does a superb job of illustrating the success that can come from Congress and the Administration working together. In the areas of defense and foreign policy, we must never divert from our traditional approach: that politics must stop at the water's edge.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that we will never deviate from that wisdom. Over the last eight years, the President and the Congress have come together in the area of defense policy, and the results have been stupendous. I know from my own experiences on the Armed Services Committee how valuable a bipartisan approach is, and I thank Secretary de Leon for articulating the concepts so well.

REMARKS BY DEPUTY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE
RUDY DE LEON, DEFENSE ORIENTATION
CONFERENCE ASSOCIATION

OCTOBER 4, 2000

Donald Bickle [DOCA President], John Olsen [DOCA Vice President], thank you both for the opportunity to join you today, for your leadership of this outstanding organization and for your service to this nation. John was in the Air Force and Donald was in the Navy during both the Second World War and Korea. We are grateful to you both. Members of the Board, members of DOCA and spouses, ladies and gentlemen.

First, allow me to begin with two simple words to every one of you. Thank you. Most of you will recall a time not so long ago when virtually every American had a family member or a friend in uniform and when what Tom Brokaw calls the Greatest Generation shared the lessons of their lives with the generations that followed.

Today, in an era when the military is smaller and less visible in our society, you—the members of that Greatest Generation—have been a bridge like no other. As informed observers with experience and insights into the military, and as respected and powerful voices within your communities, you have been in a unique position to help the nation understand the sacrifices and needs of our sons and daughters in uniform. And that is why I wanted to speak to you today.
